Comments: I am a long term climber (40 years) and believe that fixed anchors in wilderness should be managed like any other activity. Climbers are not great at self regulation and the NPS should sort out a process similar to Eldorado Canyon State Park and the Flatirons or for that matter Joshua Tree.

My children's children need wilderness and the climbing desires of this generation should not have to compete with my grandchildren's experience.

I have climbed in many wilderness areas, including El Cap. I am a direct stakeholder and would rather never climb again than see unregulated bolting in the wilderness.

Regulate and Preserve.
