Comments: I am a newer climber, and the thought of limiting future possibilities is very sad. I want to explore our beautiful wilderness with my daughter as she gets older.

This would limit our options and easily create less safe environments.

Restricting the establishment of new routes to "existing climbing opportunities" on non-Wilderness lands is unenforceable and will create confusion amongst land managers and climbers. Non-Wilderness climbing management policy should maintain opportunities for new anchors unless and until analyses determine climbing should be restricted to protect cultural and natural resources.
