Comments: Fixed anchors are an essential piece of climbers' safety system and will do more to protect Wilderness character while providing for primitive and unconfined Wilderness climbing. Climbing is a sport that brings people together and helps people get outside in an era where more and more people are isolated and not spending time outdoors. The climbing community has managed Wilderness climbing anchors and the safety of their own community for decades. These new restrictions will not prevent people from climbing, but they will prevent people from doing so safely. Working with climbers and outdoor enthusiasts is the best way to ensure the preservation of wilderness areas. We, as climbers, want to preserve the natural beauty and sustainability more than anyone because these places are sacred to us. By working together rather than against the climbing community we can create a more beautiful future together.
