Comments: Prohibiting climbing anchors on previously established routes and preventing their future implementation poses a HUGE threat to climbers safety. Many people, including me, love the sport of climbing, but we all need stable and well maintained climbing anchors to enjoy the sport. There are many climbing locations in the US that are famous on a national and international scale which bring people from across the US and across the world to those locations for climbing. This ongoing fame educates people and allows them to experience the beauty of USA's national parks. This accumulated education and experience causes more people to be aware of these natural preserves, widely promoting the importance of respecting and maintaining nature and these natural parks.
