Comments: Hundreds of generations of elk have survived the winters coming to the feed grounds to get feed. By getting rid of feed grounds for elk the elk will not know where to go and will starve to death. When the elk figure out where to go to get feed they will be competing with the mule deer for feed and that's going to hurt the mule deer herd as well. Another big reason we shouldn't get rid of feed grounds is most of the elk are going to target the ranchers haystacks in the winter for hay. That's going to really be a pain for the ranchers when there trying to feed there cows and all the elk are eating there hay. By getting rid of these feed grounds it is going to kill of most the elk.
