Comments: No. Just no. The difference between the eastern part of the USA and the western part is land public land. Land with animals free flowing creeks and rivers no buildings few roads less pollution of all varieties: air, water, people, concrete, soil. Nobody but developers and the few rich buyers want a "Sunvalley" Brundage. We want the animals to have space, people to have space. Trees forests rivers to have space.

And control. Privileged privatization is dangerous as the population of the States grow. Privatization is only for less than 1 percent of a total population. If public lands go private they are lost forever.

No one needs their condo at the ski hill. People do need space and beauty of in developed land. Animals need space. In this day and age of climate change and population growth, the control of already public lands is vital. That they are left public is vital. Please see into the future. Please leave all public lands public with low development.
