Comments: Hi,

My name is Luke Miller and I am first and foremost a lover of our wilderness areas and national parks, and second a 10+ year rock climber. I've had the opportunity to travel and explore 30 different countries, and I can say from experience that America is unique because of our wonderful wilderness areas and parks. I orient my life around park exploration, largely for rock climbing.

I've comment on the negative impact restricting fixed anchors with NPS, and I am supplementing comments here on the restriction of climbing opportunities to existing only in non-wilderness areas.

I'm proud to be a rock climber and call myself part of the community because of the history of ethics and stewardship that our community has shown for over half a century.

Enforcing route establishment and fixed anchor restriction on Non-Wilderness climbing areas will create a lot of confusion for land managers and climbers alike. This broad restriction is unnecessary and we should maintain the current policy until local analysis deems that climbing development should be restricted in an area.
