Comments: The wilderness act is for the permanent good of the whole people, as LBJ said. Fixed anchors support, rather than harm, that end goal. They make experiencing the outdoors, with minimal impact, something that the average person with access to a rope and some gear, able to do, safely. Furthermore, as this is the established norm, prohibiting fixed anchors will be a significant safety hazard to that very same "whole people" that are meant to benefit from the beautiful, wild spaces of this country.
