Comments: I have read the NORTHWEST FOREST PLAN. I believe it is intended to significantly change the direction of USFS Active Management in Western Washington, Oregon, and Northern California. However, the USFS has proven beyond any reasonable doubt or the letter of the law that Active Management is nothing short of the destruction of our incredible forest resources at the hand of USFS and BLM in conjunction with the insatiable appetite of the forest products industry; all one tight-knit culture, shown over and over to be incapable of public trust, decade after decade.

Given the late hour of this recovery plan, I believe the best recourse to this devastating Active Management is to eliminate ALL future logging of ALL types, road building, and ATV traffic on USFS AND BLM LANDS in the designated Forests in this NWFP for the next 100 years. I do believe the USDA and USDI need to fund recreational trail maintenance, law enforcement, and buildings and utility overhead through annual congressional appropriations, rather than the currently failed "sustained yield" program. The economic benefit of these devastated forest resources is no longer sustainable and must be eliminated immediately for the greater good of human life on this planet.
