Comments: Climbing anchors are an integral part of this sport, by restricting the installation of climbing anchors the USFS is effectively killing the sport of climbing. Climbing has a grand history in America that is deeply tied to USFS land and some of the most incredible rocks in our country and on the world line in USFS. Climbing anchors also require maintenance for safe use and a restriction of insolation would prevent the updating of bolting practices. People will climb no matter what, and if climbing anchors are no longer an option, safe climbing is impossible and injury or death will increase. This dissection do not only effect a small but growing population of climbers, but so many more.
