Comments: I'm a rock climber, so this is different than protecting the wilderness from helicopter landings or oil drilling. However, I still believe that leave-no-trace in the wilderness must be honored and upheld, regardless of our personal desires if the wilderness is to be protected.

We have to be able to think outside ourselves and our selfish desires to insure the preservation of the wilderness. Permanent anchors should NOT be allowed. Come on fellow climbers, put the unspoiled beauty of the wilderness above your desires for convenience! I can't believe we're even having this discussion because all climbers should prioritize protecting the wilderness!
