Comments: I have seen the destructive nature of rock climber activities in natural areas. In some places ancient rock art has been disturbed by the influx of large numbers of climbers. We are in danger of losing some historically important and invaluable pristine places for the recreation predilection of a minority of the general population. This needs to be managed and in some places curtailed and not let a small group of folks destroy our natural heritage. I oppose the placement of fixed anchors and equipment for the use of rock climbers on public property.
