Comments: I oppose fixed climbing anchors in wilderness areas. If people can't find recreation in the wilderness without harming it, let them play in artificial settings and leave nature as it is supposed to be, for people and wildlife.

And in any case, the Wilderness Act prohibits installations and structures like permanent fixed climbing anchors in order to protect the areas' wild character. The Act's strict prohibitions, including its prohibition on installations, cannot be overcome by a desire to facilitate or enhance a particular form of recreation, and the narrow administrative exception for installations does not extend to the general public seeking to create developed recreational activities in Wilderness.

The agencies' primary duty is to protect Wilderness in its natural, untrammeled state, and the Wilderness Act's ban on installations can only be overcome in rare administrative circumstances where the installation is necessary to protect Wilderness in its natural, untrammeled state.

Agencies have no duty to develop Wilderness to provide "opportunities for primitive recreation." Wilderness, by its very existence, provides these opportunities-the agencies need only to protect the Wilderness according to the provisions of the Wilderness Act to safeguard the opportunity.
