Comments: The Wilderness Act prohibits installations and structures like permanent fixed climbing anchors in order to protect the areas' wild character. Fixed climbing anchors must not be allowed in Wilderness. Federal agencies have no duty to develop Wilderness to provide "opportunities for primitive recreation", and while it may be true that fewer people will climb certain routes in Wilderness if they don't have fixed bolts or other permanently-installed protection, such installations are prohibited and should be. The primary duty of Federal Agencies is to protect Wilderness in its natural, untrammled state, and the Wilderness Act's ban on installations should not be circumvented.
