Comments: Prohibiting fixed anchors will threaten America's rich climbing legacy and could erase some of the world's greatest climbing achievements and limit access to an activity that creates an appreciation for the world's many resources. Fixed anchors are an essential piece of climbers' safety system and it is unreasonable for federal agencies to create new guidance policies prohibiting Wilderness climbing anchors across the country when they have allowed, managed, and authorized fixed anchors for decades. Prohibiting fixed anchors will create safety issues by imposing unnecessary obstacles to the maintenance of fixed anchors, a responsibility undertaken by the climbing community. Restricting the establishment of new routes to "existing climbing opportunities" on non-Wilderness lands is unenforceable and will create confusion amongst land managers and climbers. Non-Wilderness climbing management policy should maintain opportunities for new anchors unless and until analyses determine climbing should be restricted to protect cultural and natural resources.
