Comments: Living within the Willamette National Forest's footprint (Oakridge, OR) is an amazing experience, but is also a terrifying one. It seems that summer is no longer an enjoyable season for our community due to the constant threat of wildfire from the abundant fuels from unmanaged national forest land PODS that surround us. Action such as prescribed burns and selective thinning are what's going to save us from an inevitable fate if these actions aren't taken. We desperately need forest fuel reduction to save our forests and community.
