

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 1/25/2024 2:25:49 AM

First name: Peter

Last name: Anon

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Hi, I just want to say that I think this policy goes against everything the USFS stands for. Climbers are some of the best stewards for national park preservation and this policy only hinders their ability to give back to the parks. National parks are meant to be enjoyed. Climbers have been climbing safely for decades albeit, the occasional accident from extremists free soloers or those who are ignorant of their safety and knowledge. 99.9% of climbers are already inspecting bolts every time they approach them. Save the USFS staff from having to do this monotonous job with their lacking numbers to get it done.