Comments: I strongly oppose the new proposal regarding restriction of sport climbing routes. The emphasis in those regulations should be on encouraging safe, proven, and accessible for everyone able to climb the rock methods. Allowing one authority (park services) to take control of what is clearly not the area of their expertise seems rather short sighted, unrealistic, and simply corrupted. Exploring the outdoors is in the healthy human nature. Restricting such simple thing like the screw in the wall for a small fraction of the population but allowing massive parking lots and asphalted walk ways for everybody's comfort in the parks makes just no sense.
