Comments: The danger to our local communities and environment have been shown to us time and time again through environmental impact assessments, scientific studies, or worse of all, real life consequences. There is no benefits great enough to outweigh the inevitable negative impact of future expositions from exploratory investigations to ultimate resource extraction. We do not want to end up in an irreversible mess we cannot handle. These lands and water sources are all connected and inseparable, as are the people who live in the many potentially impacted communities. Thank you.
