

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 1/26/2024 5:13:18 PM

First name: Jenna

Last name: Randall

Organization:

Title:

Comments: The fixed anchor prohibition in National Forests is an unreasonable and illogical piece of legislation. Fixed anchors are an essential part of climbing safety, and banning them would lead to an increase in accidents and rescues as well as more stress on the rock as people place their own gear. In addition, national forests have allowed fixed climbing anchors for decades. It is established as a part of climbing in these areas and is unreasonable to remove this safety measure now.