Comments: Climbing is a sport and activity that gets people into the wild places and allows us to savor and cherish these very special places and to protect them for the generations to come. Climbing anchors are a critical piece of safety that ensures that people can recreate in the climbing context safely, prohibiting these, or placing logistical and budget burdens will mean that things will get less safe. I've personally lost friend who died climbing in Wind River Range after rockfall severed improvised anchor on Pingora peak. If there were safe bolt anchors, she could still be here with us.
