Comments: I strongly oppose the prohibition of rock climbing anchors. These are essential infrastructure for climbers to safely descend routes. They are almost entirely installed by trained and experienced climbers in a smart, ethical manner. To go an d remove these would be wasteful and dangerous as in many areas it would put the technician at risk of harm. And then the next climber would find themselves facing a bolt scar instead of a safe way to descend.

I do not see a reasonable explanation of removing these or prohibiting the installation and maintenance of rock climbing anchors in our public lands.
