

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 1/26/2024 11:14:58 PM

First name: Adam

Last name: Muss

Organization:

Title:

Comments: Do not remove fixed anchors on traditional climbing routes. If sport routes have to go then so be it. I agree crags have been overdeveloped and it's unsightly. I travel to your country to experience climbs in places like Yosemite, Joshua and Red Rocks. If you decide to remove fixed anchors on a traditional climb where a traditional anchor isn't feasible you could very easily kill someone. An uptick in deaths in your national parks will definitely negatively impact tourism. I for one will just stay in my country where I know the climbs I want to explore are not made unsafe by the government. The national parks of the US are the birthplace and mecca of climbing and I want it to stay that way so that I can explore it for the rest of my life, which is hopefully a long while since I'm 23. There needs to be further regulation in new bolting projects. Cramming sport routes beside each other for the sake of putting up a route and wanting to be a first ascensionist is completely absurd.