Comments: While I recognize that national forests have many uses and many users, I find the proposal to restrict climbing anchors / bolts to be concerning. I would ask that the USFS bring actual concerns to the American Alpine Club or Access Fund (the two main organizations representing climbers). Are there specific examples of bolts/anchors that are a problem? If so, let's have a discussion. I don't think the majority of climbers are going to cause an issue with bolting, but if there is a disagreement, please have a discussion rather than remove opportunity/safety. Thank you for your consideration.
