Comments: Save our last remaining old growth forests. We, the animals, the plants, the air and the water all need them and their maturity. This should not be about money, but about protecting all life on earth in the present and continuing climate chaos we've created. And don't even think that we know how to "manage" old growth by reducing fuel hazards, or by "proactive stewardship," or by protecting resiliency. These are buzzwords to allow the industry to sidestep the demand that there be NO MORE HARVESTING OF OLD GROWTH. We should be protecting nature, our only buffer against the disasters that are coming, not pretending we know better than she does and all in the service of making more money.
