Comments: Hello,

Please reconsider eliminating the placement of fixed rock climbing anchors on USFS land. I have been fortunate enough to have climbed throughout the US on forest service land and been able to appreciate the US public land system. I believe that climbers as a group are good stewards of the land and abide by closures (Raptor Closures & Others) when requested. As a group they are low impact to the public land. While conservation is very important I feel that the impact that this will have will have a disproportionate impact on climbing while having negligible upside on conservation.

Thanks for your consideration,
Michael Tritt
