

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 1/29/2024 6:18:32 PM

First name: Andrew

Last name: Salgado

Organization:

Title:

Comments: I have been a guide for 10 years and know when something is effective on the environment and climbing definitely is the farthest thing.

The forest service should be looking at other things that impact our land in so many ways.

For one the Caja del rio area by Santa Fe has the worst unlawful acts to the land. The people squatting out there, illegal aliens from Mexico that cut every tree in sight, every single one are all fully alive green trees. After that they sell them to the public who doesn't even know there buying poached wood from caja del rio. Climbing equipment doesn't do anything to the environment and the climbing community is the most respectful stewards of the land.