Comments: As a route developer in wilderness areas, please do not do this.

Fixed anchors are necessary in my area of remote, rural Northwest California. They have minimal visual impact and negligible physical impact. Enforcing a fixed anchor ban would destroy one of the most wonderful things about where I live. Most if not all of the installed fixed hardware that I have come in contact with was installed responsibly with attention paid to safety and the future. They are not harming anyone, or anything for that matter.

I implore you: do not prohibit installing fixed hardware in wilderness areas.
