Comments: Please consider how this can be viewed through the lens of equity of access. Due to various societal and systemic barriers, many people from communities of color are now entering, what has for decades been a predominantly white sport, rock climbing. I feel that our new generation of climbers of color deserve an opportunity to climb in incredible wilderness spaces that have been legally accessed by white folks for decades. Please keep climbing bolts for our upcoming climbers, who by connecting with the land, will also be our next generation of outdoor advocates.
