Comments: I fully support a climbing management plan, particularly as it relates to wilderness. I think it is extremely prudent for the USFS to review the use of public lands by the climbing community, and the impact that these activities have on the landscape with regard to fixtures etc. I am a frequent hiker and backcountry quiet user, and it is necessary, as our public lands become ever more visited and crowded, to assess the use and abuse various groups are inflicting upon the land - which is first and foremost an ecosystem and habitat. Thank you.
