

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 1/29/2024 11:16:30 PM

First name: Michael

Last name: Clark

Organization:

Title:

Comments: At least in business law, if you have a policy or even fail to act to prevent foreseeable accidents, you are liable for lawsuits with many precedents to ensure an expensive settlement. It would be extremely likely that limiting how anchors and other fixed climbing placements would result in injury or death. With all the business law related precedents, not only are you making a decision likely for death or bodily injury, but you are also opening yourself up to expensive lawsuits.