Comments: I disagree with the need to add a bureaucratic assessment of whether or not a fixed anchor fulfills the minimum requirement analysis (MRA). There are significant areas of wilderness that are unexplored and prime for recreation that will forever be unexplored due to the inability to safely protect with 'traditional' climbing equipment and need to be bolted with fixed protection. With climbing being a welcoming society into teaching and learning about wilderness and environmental sustainability, walling off these areas are counterproductive with the core mission of wilderness and wild areas of nature.
