Comments: I would like to second the remarks made by the Access Fund (2024) as I fully agree with their statements found on their website: "Restricting the establishment of new routes to "existing climbing opportunities" on non-Wilderness lands is unenforceable and will create confusion amongst land managers and climbers. Non-Wilderness climbing management policy should maintain opportunities for new anchors unless and until analyses determine climbing should be restricted to protect cultural and natural resources."

As an avid climber myself and an advocate as well for sustainability, I hope you take into consideration our perspective.
