Comments: I can't believe we're doing this again.

Hiking, camping, and campfires, all of which require permanent fixtures in the wilderness are somehow legitimate, but fixed anchors are not?

This leaves me with no other choice than to oppose all new wilderness.

For shame.

This whole thing just reminds me of the whole notion that this land was unoccupied before Columbus.

It wasn't; my forebears were here, and Muir's were not.

Please keep climbing in all its forms a legitimate activity on public land.

Thank you!
