Comments: This proposal seems unreasonable to this climber and forest service employee. It creates a host of safety issues for climbers in the wilderness. What use is preserving the wilderness if we cannot go out there and experience it? And how can one experience the vertical world without the use of anchors to get down? You throw people into danger by putting forth this act. I want to preserve the wilderness, but there is a way to do that without outlawing anchors for climbing. These quote on quote installations do nothing to detract from the wilderness; they are unobtrusive. Furthermore they allow people to learn to love the wilderness. Your goal will be met by allowing people to love the wilderness, not restricting access and causing safety hazards.
