Comments: Hi I think that climbing is a totally legitimate recreation to engage in at a national forest. Bolts do not contribute to the contamination of national forest lands, and should be able to continue to be replaced, added, and maintained. Part of the way people engage with national forests is through climbing, and as a climber, I think we are good stewards of the land and for the most part try and take good care of or improve the land. Please take my thoughts into consideration.
