Comments: While I support the intention of the draft (i.e. having more oversight over hardware and other installations in wilderness) I'm concerned about implementation;

There are so many pieces of artificial climbing hardware, many of which are undocumented, and it seems impractical that the already-stretched management resources would take on the responsibility of overseeing this without any meaningful additional resources.

We all know how long it can take to get things accomplished within governmental agencies, and in this case it poses a safety risk as climbing hardware needs to be replaced in a timely manner.
