Comments: Restricting the establishment of new routes will be really hard to manage. It will be hard for land managers to differentiate between maintaining existing routes and adding new ones. I think this will cause a lot of confusion amongst the community. Establishing new routes helps push climbing to its limits. It can help inspire people to visit an area and care for the land. By restricting this, I think we restrict access and exposure for people who begin to love the outdoors because of climbing (like me!)
