Comments: I am very concerned that preservation of the wilderness character be the top priority in the management of Bob Marshall Wilderness area, and not the approval of human visitors, including guiding/packing services who can be causing destruction of wilderness areas by bringing in too many people and animals that disrupt wildlife and destroy the native flora.

Changes in permitting for large groups should be open to public scrutiny, data should be collected on their impacts before approval, and time needs to be given for public comments.

Our wildlife and native flora are all suffering from climate change and too much human contact. We do not have much wilderness left. Protecting it from overuse is necessary before it is destroyed!
