Comments: I humbly ask you to reexamine this dangerous and nonsensical new rule. I routinely rappel through slot canyons both in and out of national parks and wilderness areas. Doing this without the ability to leave even a sling behind would make this activity so dangerous it would become impossible. These canyons CANNOT be traversed without the aid of rappelling gear and leaving slings behind. I would also question who this is even affecting, because of that fact that you cannot travel these canyons without rappelling no one other than those of us who choose this sport could ever know that slings and or bolts even exist in the canyon. This rule would close hundreds of canyons for the benefit of absolutely no one.
