

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 1/30/2024 10:37:05 PM

First name: Katherine

Last name: Aguilar-Langella

Organization:

Title:

Comments: The United States currently has not put the national forests, national parks, and other public and protected land in the top priority for funding. This needs to change for both ours and future generations. We cannot keep under funding the environment. Having the substantial funding would allow more jobs to become available for the many Americans who appreciate and want to protect these places. I have personally found it very difficult to find jobs within the public lands department or fish and wildlife due to underfunding. I have also many times called for information and found no staff present in the ranger stations for the same reason. And several times I have reported areas being absolutely trashed and was told there weren't enough employees to come clean up due to lack of funding. Ive seen the administration under several presidents place funding in defense which ends up in contractors pockets. But barely any for the best thing about this country which is its beautiful protected lands. We must push to change these policies and put the departments that protect and serve the land at the top of the priority list