Comments: Restricting the establishment of new routes to "existing climbing opportunities" on non-Wilderness lands is unenforceable and will create confusion amongst land managers and climbers. Non-Wilderness climbing management policy should maintain opportunities for new anchors unless and until analyses determine climbing should be restricted to protect cultural and natural resources.

Rock climbing is a healthy way of recreation and I think the positive impact this community has is bigger and goes beyond the rock climbing activity, climbing are the means to meet like minded people that love nature and are one of the more respectful of it.
