Comments: Hi, my name is Vincent Hamilton and I am a climber from Canada. Here are my comments.

Restricting the establishment of new routes to "existing climbing opportunities" on non-Wilderness lands is unenforceable and will create confusion amongst land managers and climbers. Non-Wilderness climbing management policy should maintain opportunities for new anchors unless and until analyses determine climbing should be restricted to protect cultural and natural resources. This will allow climbers to establish new climbing routes safely and people from all around the world to come to US to climb many of the world's most iconic routes in amazing places.
