Comments: Old growth forests equal compatibility with life. To log these or destroy our forests is unthinkable.

Do everything possible to preserve our old growth and mature forests so future generations can have a healthy world to live in.

Not only do old growth forests provide the most logical and cost-effective solution to climate change by sequestering huge amounts of carbon, they provide shade and habitats to many animals that are being shunted away from their homes by overdevelopment.

Trees are sentient beings and new research by Heartmath shows that they have consciousness and are interconnected with other trees even miles away. They also react to human emotions and are essential to our life on earth. More info can be found here: <https://www.heartmath.org/resources/videos/interconnectivity-tree-research-project/>

For the survival of the current and future generations of all living things: save our trees!
