Comments: Fixed anchors are a huge part of safe outdoor climbing and the exploration of wilderness areas vertically. It allows us to safely climb and explore especially when those climbers are new or inexperienced. I think of this especially when planning to take my two young children out into these areas to explore and enjoy climbing. Removing these critical pieces of gear would make this significantly more dangerous for the climbing community at large but especially for young and inexperienced climbers.

Additionally, climbers have a long history of great stewardship of these wilderness areas.
