

Data Submitted (UTC 11): 1/30/2024 2:54:33 AM

First name: Tyler

Last name: Macintyre

Organization:

Title:

Comments: I believe that this policy is misguided, as bolts are an integral part of rock climbing safety systems and should be allowed in wilderness areas, though should remain rare. Without bolted anchors many of the great experiences I have had in Americas wilderness would be at best considerably more dangerous and at worst completely inaccessible. Climbing is a wonderful way to access Americas wilderness and fixed anchors help keep it safe, secure, and wild for future generations.