Comments: rock climbing in the great outdoors whether it be national forest, national park, or otherwise should be allowed to continue. climbing offers a unique connection with nature and the self that is irreplaceable. being in this nature sparks a desire to care for these spaces.

not allowing fixed gear to be replaced poses a threat to the safety of any climber who may come across the gear in the time period waiting for approval.

rock climbing has been integral to my personal mental health and well being in this world. it has helped grow my connection to the land, to myself, and to others.
