Comments: I strongly oppose the banning of fixed anchors and equipment in wilderness areas. As a rock climber, I rely on fixed bolts as a vital part of my safety system. Prohibiting fixed anchors will make it more difficult for many to access and explore many parts of our wilderness areas, and will erase much of America's rich climbing history. I urge the NPS to look into more reasonable climbing management policies that protect our wilderness without completely removing the ability for climbers to safely access vertical terrain.
