Comments: We need to protect our trees more than ever before. We are in a climate crisis. We know the cooling affects of trees. We know the importance of the habitat they provide to promote biodiversity for the planet and its species. We know the purifying affects trees have on the air we breath. We know trees communicate with one another to protect themselves. We know the beneficial affects trees have on calming human nervous systems. Old growth trees are a precious resource for the health of our planet. They are in danger from developers. This is a moment to consciously protect old growth trees for future generations to have a fighting chance to live on this planet.
