Comments: To whom it may concern,

my overriding concern is that the U.S . forest service of which I'm a former employee, preserve and protect the small percentage of old growth and mature forests that still exist today in the United States. By doing so, you will preserve the magnificent beauty that contributes to all of our spiritual, recreational, social and economic health of all our people in all socio-economic levels. Rich and poor alike find these forests to be indispensable to a rich quality of life that we expect to sustain.

Therefore, I urge you to resist any further encroachment on these forests by development or cutting for lumber.

We must preserve this precious treasure for all present and future citizens to enjoy.
